Clark Co. East Asian medicine practitioner suspended due to rape charges

OLYMPIA — State health officials have suspended the East Asian medicine practitioner license of Kooyeoll Jung (ACUP.AC.00000658) after he was criminally charged with rape.

Charges state that Jung forced himself on a patient during a regularly scheduled acupuncture treatment session. He was charged in Clark County Superior Court with second-degree rape and indecent liberties by forcible compulsion.

Jung cannot practice in Washington until the charges against his license are resolved. He has 20 days to request a hearing to contest the charges.

The documents in this case can be seen online by clicking “Look up a health care provider” on the Department of Health website. Copies can be requested by calling 360-236-4700. That number can also be used to file complaints against health care providers in Washington.

The Department of Health protects and promotes public health, safety, and welfare in Washington by regulating the competency and quality of health care providers. The agency establishes, monitors, and enforces qualifications for licensing, consistent standards of practice, continuing competency mechanisms, and discipline. Rules, policies, and procedures promote the delivery of quality health care to people in Washington.
